Youth Tries To End Life With a Rifle

20-Year-Old Countian, Near York Springs, Fires .22 Calibre Shot Into Brain.

HIS CONDITION IS "CRITICAL"

15-YEAR-OLD BROTHER HEARS SHOT BUT THINKS IT WAS FOR BIRDS.

Raymond Davis, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harland Davis, who reside a half mile from York Springs on the Idaville road, is unconscious and in a critical condition in the Annie M. Warner hospital this afternoon as the result of what is said to have been an attempt to take his life by shooting this morning.

Davis was found, unconscious, in a feed entry of the barn at the Davis home this morning about 7:30 o'clock by a 15-year-old brother. The boy was attracted by the sound of a shot. He told Dr. Robert Stoner, York Springs, who was called to the Davis home, that he had first believed his brother was shooting at birds.

The youth was found lying in the entry with a .22 calibre rifle by his side and a bullet wound in the center of his forehead. The lead pellet did not emerge but is imbedded in the boy's brain. Near his hand was a box of .22 calibre "shorts" with one cartridge missing. The rifle he used was of the pump-gun type.

Powder burns about the wound on the youth's forehead gave strength to the suicide theory. Members of the family stated that the young man had appeared to be in normal health and spirits earlier in the morning and were at a loss to explain the apparent attempt to take his life.

Police Investigate

Davis was rushed to the Annie M. Warner hospital here by Dr. Robert Stoner in the L. C. Pittenturf ambulance from York Springs.

Davis had not regained consciousness this afternoon.

Corporal L. D. Gritman of the state police returned to Gettysburg this afternoon after conducting an investigation of the shooting and stated that he believed the wound was self-inflicted.

The officer stated that none of the members of the family had noticed anything unusual about Raymond's conduct this morning. He frequently took the rifle from the house, they said, and used it to shoot pigeons about the barn.

Corporal Gritman said the wounded youth was found by his brother, Glenn, aged 15 years.

TICKET SALES REPORTED GOOD

Gettysburg high school will present its annual senior play Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. "The Late Christopher Bean" a comedy in three acts, is the vehicle chosen for the display of the histrionic talents of the members of the graduating class.

Encouraging reports are being received on advance sales of tickets. No reserved seats are being sold.

With most of the members of the cast benefiting from previous experience on the stage in other school productions, the rehearsals being held daily give promise of a first-rate performance Friday evening.

The production is being directed by Miss Ruth McIlhenny and Miss Ruth Scott of the English department at the high school.

The plot of the play concerns the work of Christopher Bean, deceased painter, that had been left to Dr. Haggett by the painter in payment for medical care. Members of the Haggett family receive a surprise when an old friend of Bean's pays the overdue doctor's bill and takes some of the paintings as mementoes of the artist. Another caller at the Haggett home pays tribute to the memory of Bean, and the family is startled to learn he is a great painter and the paintings of Bean worth a fortune. Humorous situations arise as the family scurries about to locate all of the works of Christopher Bean.

2 Entombed Men, Body of Companion Reached in Mine

Rescue Crews Tear Way Through Last Barrier to Reach Men Who Have Been 141 Feet Underground Since Easter Sunday; Ask For Hypodermic Injections

(Copyright 1936, By Associated Press)

Moose Lake, Nova Scotia, April 22.—A rescue crew digging through 141 feet of rock and dirt reached the two living men entombed more than nine days in the Moose river gold mine today.

They broke through a final wall of stone and dirt to reach Dr. D. E. Robertson and Charles Alfred Scadding, both of whom were in agony from the privations they have endured during their long wait underground.

A group of three veteran coal miners, members of Nova Scotia's famous mine rescue organization, the Draegermen, formed the spear-head of the underground attack which reached the noted Toronto surgeon and his friend.

Their companion on the descent into the mine on Easter Sunday night, Herman Magill, died two days ago from privations.

So unbearable was the pain that the two entombed men suffered that Dr. Robertson asked for hypodermic injections at once.

At the top of the rescue shaft stood hundreds of persons. Many of them had been on duty day and night, striving as best they could to assist in the work of rescue.

When the report came up from the depths that the two men at last had been reached, cheers broke out.

Police Clear Way

The excitement was so intense tha Royal Canadian mounted police cleared a space and warned the crowd to stay back from the mine head.

Stretchers were taken down the shaft to assist in bringing the men up.

There still was danger down below, for the rescue crews had pushed forward so fast that little time had been wasted in shoving-up the crumbling walls properly.

The announcement of the rescuers' success was made by an excited miner who came to the top of the rescue shaft and shouted:

"We've got through!"

For anxious moments afterward, there was no further news from the workings, but it was surmised that the miners had reached a comparatively unobstructed gallery leading to the trapped men.

Dangerous Ascent

Dr. F. R. Davis, minister of health, of Nova Scotia, went down the rescue shaft, carrying a hypodermic needle and other medical supplies.

Other men picked up blankets and hot water bottles to be used in caring for the suffering men below.

It was not known on the surface how long it would take to get the two living men and the body of their dead companion up into the open air but officials said they thought it would take at least an hour.

The way which lay before them was a long, twisting narrow, low tunnel, through which it was difficult to carry anything.

The special stretchers which had been devised for the rescue had

Engaged Couple, Who Will Go to Liberia, Are Guests at Supper

One hundred and fifty persons, including members of the board of St. James Lutheran church and guests, attended a covered dish supper in the dining rooms of the church Tuesday evening in honor of Gordon Parker, senior at the Lutheran theological seminary, and his fiance, Miss Evelyn Zimmerman, Lititz, a member of the freshman class at Gettysburg college. After their wedding in June the couple will go to Liberia as missionaries.

The supper at the church was a surprise to the couple who had been invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Culp, York street, for dinner. Mr. Culp served as toastmaster at the supper at the church. The program included violin selections by Augustus Hackman, accompanied by Miss Marion Miller. Eddie and Arthur Hughes gave instrumental duets and Mrs. Roy E. Zinn sang "At Dawning" and "Because," accompanied by her daughter, Miss Eleanor Zinn.

A feature of the entertainment program was a humorous sketch written by Mr. Culp portraying a meeting of the Lutheran missionaries in Africa as they receive word that Mr. Parker and Miss Zimmerman are to join them in the mission field. Those who took part in the sketch included Raymond Witter, Mrs. William Mentzer, James Fisher, Mrs. Luther McDonnell and Virginia Storrick.

The Rev. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of Miss Zimmerman's church at Lititz, and the Rev. Spencer W. Aungst, pastor at St. James Lutheran, spoke. Remarks by Mr. Culp were interrupted by the appearance of Norman Storrick bearing a chest of silver for the guests of honor, contributed by the Sunday school and friends of the church.

The program concluded with the presentation of shadow pictures by Miss Ruth Scott's class of the Sunday school, formerly taught by Mr. Parker.

A brief business meeting of the official board of the church followed the program when routine business was transacted and announcement made that an intermediate supper will be held in June when announcement will be made of the winners of the achievement contest being conducted in that department.

Miss Mildred M. Palmer, 16, High School Sophomore, Attempts to End Life by Leaping From 70-Foot Tower

May Survive 70-Foot Leap

Miss Mildred M. Palmer, who leaped from high observatory tower on battlefield in attempt to commit suicide.

Jumps From Observation Platform on Culp's Hill; Had Been Followed by Two Little Girls Who Discerned Suspicious Actions; Says She Doesn't Know Why She Did It.

CONDITION IS CRITICAL; SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT DURING NIGHT

Miss Mildred Mae Palmer, 16-year-old Gettysburg high school sophomore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Lloyd Palmer, 140 Water street, leaped from the 70-foot steel observatory tower on Culp's Hill on the battlefield, shortly before five o'clock Tuesday afternoon in what police believe was an attempt to end her own life.

"I don't know why I did it," the critically injured girl told her father in her room at the Annie M. Warner hospital this morning after spending a comparatively restful night and showing a change for the better, sixteen hours after the almost tragic incident.

With the possible motive for her act still a mystery, the father, this morning, discarded all reference to alleged previous threats of committing suicide as "mere gossip."

In Good Spirits

"Her home life was happy. She was happy in school and we never discerned anything that might lead us to believe that she was unhappy about anything," the grief-stricken father said this morning.

Miss Palmer was in her usual good spirits Tuesday morning when she left for school. She was late and at noon secured her parents' signature to a tardy slip. Before she left her home at noon Mildred went to her bedroom, according to her father, laid back her bed covers and placed her nightgown on the bed "as she invariably did," her father continued, and was given money to purchase a pair of shoe laces. When she left she was in good spirits, her father added.

Mr. Palmer is a salesman for the John C. Lower company, wholesale grocers.

In Jovial Mood

Professor Guile W. Lefever, high school principal, said the girl was in a "jovial" mood when she turned in her tardy slip. He said she was a good student.

High school was dismissed earlier than usual Tuesday afternoon to permit the students to attend the baseball game on the school diamond.

Miss Palmer left the building with other students and walked up Baltimore street, circled center square and then walked out Carlisle street as far as the Western Maryland railroad station, where, she told her father, she turned east toward Stratton street. She then walked up Stratton street to East Middle street, then east to East Confederate avenue.

Little Miss Jean Codori, 12, and Caroline Codori, 8, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Codori, said they saw Miss Palmer walking on East Middle street. A few minutes later the Codori girls left their home on East Middle street to go to violet island, on the Battlefield, to pick violets.

Youngsters Follow Girl

The Codori sisters said they "thought it was funny" that a girl dressed so nicely as Miss Palmer should be walking on the Battlefield avenue alone, and that they decided to follow her. The sisters said they followed Miss Palmer along East Confederate avenue, with Miss Palmer some distance ahead.

The Codori girls said they ran to catch up to Miss Palmer and that when they neared the bend, near the third bridge, Miss Palmer turned around and when she saw the Codori sisters she started to run.

Innocently, and suspicious of Miss Palmer's actions, the Codori sisters then said they "cut through the woods" to "get ahead" of Miss Palmer. When they emerged onto the avenue again, Miss Palmer was only a few feet ahead of them and that she was crying.

At Spangler's Spring Miss Palmer disappeared up an avenue leading to Culp's Hill and the Codori girls said they went to pick violets.

A short time later a light rain began falling and the girls decided to return home. Instead, Caroline said she and her sister decided to look for the girl because "I thought it was funny she should act the way she did."

Books On Platform

When the Codori girls arrived at the observatory tower they found others there and Miss Palmer was being placed in an automobile.

Caroline Codori said she walked to the top of the tower and found Miss Palmer's school books and compact. She said she leafed through the pages to find the name of the girl which she located on some papers.

Dwight Ellis, 43, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, a magazine salesman, accompanied by W. Preston Hull, post office employe, at whose home Ellis was staying, went to the state police barracks here shortly after seven o'clock, as soon as he learned of the almost tragic occurrence.

Ellis said he had been working in Heidlersburg in the afternoon and had returned to Gettysburg shortly before 4:30 o'clock. He said he called for his mail at the post office and then decided to see part of the

FORMER FELON ADMITS KILLING MRS. TITTERTON

Traced by Piece of Upholsterer's Cord; Says He Assaulted Woman.

New York, April 22 (AP)—The murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton was solved and reacted by the confessed slayer Tuesday in the Beekman Place apartment where the writer's almost nude body was found in a bathtub April 10.

Seized after a piece of cord—the only tangible clue—was traced to him, John C. Fiorenza, 24, was charged with the slaying.

Fiorenza, an upholsterer, who was present when the titian-haired author's strangled body was found and who himself telephoned police from the Titterton apartment, was said by high authorities to have admitted he attacked, tried vainly to drown, and then garroted Mrs. Titterton.

To Ask Death Penalty

After reenacting the crime at the scene, in the presence of Lewis J. Valentine, police commissioner, and William C. Dodge, district attorney, who jointly announced his confession, the former convict was booked on a homicide charge signed by six detectives.

The district attorney said the case would be presented to the grand jury Thursday. He predicted an indictment carrying the death penalty would be returned.

As in the detective stories that held her interest—she was one of the founders of the Crime Club—the mystery surrounding Mrs. Titterton's death was cleared away, in the eyes of police at least, with dramatic suddenness.

Twine Only 13 Inches Long

And all through a thirteen-inch piece of twine, which was found under her body and traced laboriously to the upholstery shop where Fiorenza was employed.

Commissioner Valentine and Mr. Dodge announced:

"We have broken the Titterton case, and now have in custody the perpetrator, who has confessed. He is John C. Fiorenza, 24 years old, an upholsterer, of 1601 Sixty-fifth street, Brooklyn."

Fiorenza was pictured in the statement issued by Dodge and Valentine as having gone to Mrs. Titterton's apartment alone on the morning of the crime and to have reported for work after killing her.

Returned With Employer

The next few hours he spent repairing a love seat for the Titterton's, the officials said and then returned with his employer, Theodore Kruger, to deliver it.

Accompanied by two employes of the building, summoned when no one answered the Titterton's doorbell, they went to the fourth-floor apartment. Kruger who was not implicated, discovered the body and Fiorenza called the police.

Fiorenza has a police record.

Second class merit badges were presented to two members of troop 76. They were George Fissel for book binding and handicraft, and Maurice Weaver for leathercraft.

Members of troop 75 presented a practical demonstration of first-aid work.

The meeting opened with the invocation by Dr. Waltemyer. Eugene Hartman of the church troop led in the recitation of the scout oath, scout law and the flag salute. Members of the court of honor spoke briefly after announcement of the awards.

Scout Executive Zaner revealed plans for the annual camporee to be held in June at the Arendtsville union park instead of at Pardee field on the Gettysburg battlefield as has been done in previous years. The next session of the court of honor will be held in connection with the camporee.

The scout benediction brought the session to a close.

Man Confesses to Choking His Wife

Delbert H. Grant, 319 Burkhart avenue, Chambersburg, has been detained by Chambersburg police after he surrendered himself and is alleged to have admitted choking his wife Tuesday morning. Mrs. Grant was removed to the Chambersburg hospital, where her condition was not considered grave.

Mr. Grant, who is a WPA worker, gave no reason for his attack, saying he loved his wife and did not know why he attacked her. He is said to have spent three months in a Harrisburg hospital, where he was admitted September 22, 1934. Police are awaiting the outcome of the attack before preferring charges.

Gettysburg Grad Expires Tuesday

Following an operation for appendicitis, Wilbur Henry Amspacher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Amspacher, Glen Rock, died at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Malden hospital, at Malden, Massachusetts. The youth, aged 23 years and one month, had been suffering from a chronic inflammation of the appendix for some time and had entered the hospital April 16 to undergo an appendectomy.

The youth, chemist in the employ of the duPont corporation, of Wilmington, Delaware, had been working at Philadelphia, until January of this year when he was transferred to Everett, Massachusetts. He graduated from the Glen Rock high school in the class of 1930 and from Gettysburg college in 1934. He was a member of the Fraternal Protective association of Glen Rock.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Preston F. Amspacher, an instructor at the Mercersburg academy, and Lloyd L. Amspacher, at home.

ERROR IN NAME

Robert Kane, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kane, of Arendtsville, and not Wallace Kane, was the youth who flagged a truck and prevented it from running over two and a half year old Wayne Plank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Landon Plank, Biglerville, R. D. 2.

The information given to The Gettysburg Times contained the name of Wallace Kane and it should have been Robert Kane, a pupil in the eighth grade and a Boy Scout of Arendtsville.

CORRECTION

Richard G. Slaybaugh, two months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Slaybaugh, died Monday evening in the York city hospital, instead of Tuesday evening, as was inadvertently stated in Monday's edition of The Gettysburg Times.

PLANS BABY CLINIC

Miss Sylvia K. Johnson, state nurse, announced today that the semi-monthly baby clinic will be held next Wednesday afternoon, from 2 to 4 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A., center square.

The Prince established his headquarters there.

Meanwhile, Haile Selassie was understood to be making his last stand against Italian troops moving southward from Dessye.

Earlier in the day the Emperor was reported to be successful in holding up the advance 70 miles south of Dessye.

rope supports to permit them to bend around the tortuous passageway.

The miners said they feared any jars against the sides of the tunnel might cause a landslide.

The three men in the lead of the rescue efforts were Joe Simpson, unit head; George Morrell and H. Hirshfield.

They had worked steadily since 9 a. m. in the last push to reach the men. It was those three who first opened the shaft through which the approach was begun, and it was they who tore out the last rock from the rescue tunnel.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, the following message came to The Gettysburg Times direct from the mouth of the mine:

"The Minister of Mines and Doctor Davis, minister of health, of Canada, are both in the pit arranging to bring up the men as soon as the timber has been cut through. There is little stone, and the rescue crew is working with hack-saws to remove the timber that stands between them and the entombed men. They will be brought to the ambulance, which is waiting, and taken to a hospital, which has been set up in the village.

"The rescuers talked with Doctor Robinson a few minutes ago, and they are in good spirits, and can hear the workers very plainly now. They are stronger than ever before. It is only a matter of minutes until the remaining timber can be cut and thrown aside, and the men rescued."

YOUNG WOMAN PLUNGES FROM HIGH ELEVATION

Battlefield because Mrs. Ellis had told him not to fail to see Spangler's Spring.

Heard Noise of Fall

Ellis said he drove onto the battlefield and stopped at the tower on Culp's Hill. He climbed to the top where, he said, he found Miss Palmer. He talked to her and asked the direction to Spangler's Spring. Miss Palmer pointed out the direction to him, he continued, and then said: "Down there."

He told police that he said to Miss Palmer: "Gee, it's cold up here," and that she replied: "You ought to have your top coat." He said the girl appeared to be cold but was not crying.

Ellis said that he remained on the tower platform only a few minutes and then descended, leaving the girl alone on the platform.

Continuing, Ellis said when he was about to step off the bottom step of the tower he heard a loud thump that sounded like a filled bushel basket falling from a distance. He said he turned in the direction of the noise and saw Miss Palmer crumpled in a heap near the base of the tower. He went to her side, raised an arm that partly covered the girl's face and asked: "My God, what did you do this for?" The only answer was a moan. He said he thought the girl was dying.

Alone with the girl and undecided what to do, Ellis said he drove to the nearest home,—that of James Leister,—at the intersection of the battlefield avenue and the Baltimore pike, where he told of the tower incident and tried to reach the local state police barracks. Receiving no response, he said he drove into the Battlefield hotel where an employe reached Corporal Gritman at Thompson's restaurant.

Visits Other Spots

Ellis said he then went to the John Deatrick store, Baltimore street, and accompanied by Mr. Deatrick drove to the tower but the girl had been removed.

Deatrick said that Ellis asked him to drive to the tower after telling him of the incident and that when they arrived the girl had been removed. Ellis had told Deatrick that he wanted to see Spangler's Spring and the two then drove to the historic spot.

It being only a few minutes after five o'clock, Deatrick said he told Ellis of other interesting things to be seen on the battlefield and that if he cared to he would accompany him further. Deatrick said they drove to the Pennsylvania monument and a few other spots, and then returned to town.

Find Girl Groaning

Don Bream and Paul Anzengruber had driven to the high school grounds at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to ascertain the score of the baseball game. When the Bream car was halted near the school, Truman Eyler and Dan Bierer, high school students, approached in another machine and told them of the incident at the observatory tower.

The four young men drove to the tower where they found Miss Palmer lying about eight feet from the base. They said she was groaning and moaning but conscious.

Horace Smiley, park policeman, appeared and gave the young men permission to remove Miss Palmer. She was placed in the Bream car and, accompanied by Anzengruber, who drove, Bream and Eyler, she was removed to the hospital.

When Miss Palmer was admitted to the hospital attendants told the young men who had driven her there that she was in a critical condition.

Surgeons and physicians, after a hurried examination, found her condition so serious that they were unable to do much other than administer stimulants, dress a few bruises and reduce the fractured left wrist.

In Critical Condition

The hurried examination revealed that Miss Palmer was suffering from a profound shock, fractured left wrist, a probable broken back, probable ruptured spleen, a collapsed left lung, contusions of the chest, abdominal contusions and hemorrhages and probable other internal injuries.

She remained conscious, despite her serious injuries and moaned and groaned almost continuously. She slept a brief time and early in the evening asked for a drink of water. She repeated this request time and again and also asked that some of the covers be removed from her bed because she said she was so warm.

Nurses gave her small portions of water at intervals and two nurses remained in attendance.

When questioned, Miss Palmer corroborated the story told state police by Ellis. The girl said the man did not molest or touch her in any way. She told of his asking directions to Spangler's Spring and described how he was dressed.

When asked if she fell from the tower, Miss Palmer said: "I don't remember." On other occasions when she was asked the same question, Miss Palmer either closed her eyes and moaned, or simply avoided the occasion.

Shortly after seven o'clock Miss Palmer was asked the same question to which she replied: "How could I? There's a rail around it," referring to the guard rail around the observation platform at the top of the tower.

"Were you happy in school?" the girl was asked.

"Yes," she replied.

"Were you happy at home?" was another question.

"No," she said.

When she was asked why she had gone to the battlefield alone, Miss Palmer said: "I was blue. I wanted to think. I wanted to cry." She said she did not know why she had climbed the tower.

She spoke of a tall man in a dark blue sweater, "a tourist," and gave bits of the conversation about the cold wind, the top coat and other topics on the platform, all of which coincided with the story told by Ellis.

Corporal Gritman said that he is satisfied with Ellis' story as being truthful and accurate.

Miss Palmer told hospital attendants that she doesn't remember anything that happened after Ellis left the tower.

POLICE HUNT CONVICTS WHO ESCAPED JAIL

Heavily Armed Fugitives Capture and Threaten Guard In Delaware.

Georgetown, Del., April 22 (AP)—A hundred men—State troopers and special deputy sheriffs—beat through a patch of woods five miles west of here Monday night in a hunt for two heavily armed convicts who escaped Monday afternoon from the Sussex county jail by capturing and threatening the life of a guard.

The fugitives are Robert E. Wilkerson, 30-year-old desperado serving a ten-year term for assault, and John Lucas, an automobile thief, doing a three-year "stretch."

Just before the dinner hour at the jail, about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, they called Oscar Bickers, a guard, into their cell. Suspecting nothing, Bickers went in, and was overpowered by the two prisoners.

They bound him with a rope they had in readiness—obtained, possibly, while they were at large in the prison kitchen. Then Bickers felt something sharp, either a knife or razor blade, pressed into the back of his neck, and the voice of one of the convicts said:

"If you don't want your throat cut hand over the keys to the outside gate."

Bickers had only the keys to the cells. The keys to the main gate were held by Joshua Marvil, the only other guard on duty at the time, stationed in the barred anteroom between the outer gate and the prison proper.

"Open the gate," they said to Marvil, "or we'll go back and slit Bickers' throat."

Marvil, without a weapon in his hand, obeyed, and then at their command, turned over his keys.

From a closet in the anteroom the convicts took a rifle, a shot gun, and three pistols. Taking the cell and door keys, they ran outside and got away in Marvil's car, parked near the prison entrance.

As they fled, Marvil ran back into the vacated cell, and released Bickers. A telephone call to Sheriff Robert Clendaniel here organized the search party.

Marvil's automobile was found at the edge of the woods two miles west of the jail, a patch about a mile and a half long by a mile wide.

To the 75 men hastily deputized by the sheriff were added 25 State troopers, brought in from Wilmington, Dover, Bridgeville and some from this town.

The entire wood was ringed with armed men, and they began to press forward into the centre.

"Exercise the greatest care," Sheriff Clendaniel cautioned his deputies. "These men are desperadoes and they won't hesitate to shoot."

Hugh D. Smith, warden of the jail, was not there when the men broke loose.

An investigation was ordered to determine how the men obtained the cord and the knife or razor blade.

The entire jail, which houses 125 prisoners in all, has six guards, two working on each eight-hour shift. There is no stone fence outside—only a wire screen and, therefore, only the mildest of the prisoners are allowed outsde. The others, and Wilkerson was numbered among them, were allowed sometimes into the jail kitchen. They were not clad in prison garb.

Painful Piles
Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves
It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID—to relieve itching, bleeding or protruding piles. This internal medicine acts quickly even in old stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it helps to heal and restore the affected parts and relieve blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting often fail. All druggists say one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must relieve you of your Pile misery or money back.

Chapter 41

MYSTERY'S END

"Good Lord" said Allan, jumping out of his wicker chair. He stared at Morgan's tall serge-clad figure, broad shouldered, loose-jointed, lounging behind the older man.

"Good afternoon, Allan," said Morgan placidly. "How is Granny?"

"So that's the answer," Allan said with his little amused laugh. It sounded harmless enough except for the amazing fact that Morgan and Allan knew each other. But Morgan's face was at its blackest.

"How dare you go on misjudging Iris?" Then he got hold of his temper with an effort and spoke gravely. "After all, suspicion's a family trait. We'd neither of us got hardened to honesty."

Allan still looked blankly shocked and a little pale; but he snatched with fair success at his usual manner.

"Behold," said he, "the long-lost heir. My Lord, Jim, I may have fallen below the romantic ideal, but at least I never let an old woman break her heart because I pretended to be drowned."

"Granny knows I'm alive," Morgan said. "She has ever since the night you went back on Iris."

Iris stood struck, gaping and silent. She held to the wicker table to steady herself. Jim . . . Morgan, her Morgan was the dead grandson Jim she had heard of from Camilla and Allan and everyone. What a fool she'd been, not to put two and two together, not to see.

"I wrote Granny I was going round the world, going to stay away a couple of years; it's no more than you've done a half dozen times."

"And then you were found in the Hudson, all nice and dead, complete with identification."

And Morgan, explaining crossly, "I gave a poor devil some clothes and cash—left things in the pockets, never was a neat little boy like you."

And Allan: "Don't apologize. You wanted to be loved for yourself alone. I hope you keep your illusions this time!"

And then Uncle Will, forgotten in the background, quieting the two men on the edge of a new quarrel. There was a moment of politer conversation, and then Allan, poised and amiable, made his polite departure. He got hold of himself—he made a gallant exit. "I'm glad you're alive, old boy—you know that," he said as he went.

"I do know it, Al," Morgan said, and the two shook hands.

"Granny's waiting inside there," Allan added over his shoulder as he passed out of the garden. "Tell her her surprise party was a wonderful success, and that I'm going back to New York. You'll find her in the living room, probably with a fatted calf in her handbag."

But Granny was outside. She had stepped out of the French window, Aunt Ella behind her.

"I was getting a little impatient, Jim," she said. "I'm sorry not to have said more to you the night of the concert, Iris, but—for a consideration—I gave Jim my word." She beckoned Iris closer, and Iris ran into her arms and kissed her. "I'm getting what I wanted, you're marrying my grandson," she said. "We needed sound stock in the strain. You're a good child, Iris.

Iris clung to her a moment. Then she said, a little shyly, "And—and Aunt Phina?"

"You're a loyal little soul. Well, she's ridden into glory (or what's glory for her) on your skirts. Nobody's going to stop her, and she'll have enough trouble," said Granny dryly, "getting into the ultimate social Holy of Holies to keep her amused for some years yet. People like her aren't happy unless they're storming redoubts."

"She is a wonderful woman, Phina," said Uncle Will gently.

"You are wonderful people, you Lannings," said Granny, smiling, yet as if she meant it too. "Well, Mr. James Morgan Jameson. I know you have a good deal to discuss with Iris, and as I'm staying the night I'll see you children again."

The sunset was like a doorway opening into Paradise. But Iris, slim and ivory-colored and flashing-eyed in her rosy ruffled dress, turned on Morgan Jameson, angry with him as she had never been in her life. "I suppose you've been having a wonderful time with your pretty romance, haven't you? As your cousin would say, toying with the village maid?"

"Iris!"

"I think I've had enough to do with your family. Why didn't you tell me then that you loved me, that you were you, instead of driving over to Long Island and back, the Mysterious Stranger? You've behaved horribly. You talk so much about honesty—you haven't any. I never want to see you again."

It was Morgan, the quick-tempered, who remained quiet this time.

He stood quite still. He even smiled a little.

"I'm not completely intelligent," he said simply, "anymore than anybody else. But as for willfully deceiving you, I hadn't an idea of it. I couldn't foresee that you were going to be dropped into a nest of my friends and relatives."

"When you knew, you could have told me."

"When I knew, you seemed just one more girl like the rest, like Georgia. A girl who wanted Phina Weatherley's sort of thing. I do owe you apologies there, Iris. But there's one thing there's no apology coming on. I've never stopped loving you, the very best way I knew how. And I thought you loved Allan. There wasn't anything to do but take it and like it. I never meant to leave this place."

"And if I marry you, what will everybody think now? That I tried to marry Allan for what he could give me. And then when I found out you could give me as much—"

"It happens to be more," said Morgan quiety.

"I turn—just like Georgia—and snatch for you. How do I know you wouldn't think I was Georgia, any time at all, all over again? And even if you didn't, to have everyone in the world think it of me?"

"Does that matter to you," asked Morgan, "more than my love?"

She was silent. She realized, suddenly, that she was still tangled in her fears and terrors. What people thought, what they said, had no right to matter. "No, Morgan. Beside the fact that you and I love and believe in each other, it doesn't matter at all," she said. She felt something suddenly dropping from her like a heavy cloak. What the world said would never be the principal thing to her again.

He took her in his arms. After a little while:

"I had your promise, anyhow," he said. "No matter what happened, you wouldn't break your engagement. I'm glad your promise is as unbreakable as I know it to be; because there's a little more to come."

She sat down with him, his arm still around her. "Go on," she said lazily.

"When I came over, night before last, before I could get Granny's promise to let me go back and say nothing, I had to give mine to come back and live where she is part of the time. After all, it was a pretty cowardly thing to walk out on an old lady, when I was about all she had left. Uncle Will's made me see that this afternoon driving back from work. I should have stood up to the whole thing, Georgia and all, instead of running away and being the Young Misanthrope. Well, I'm going to. Only I've got to ask you to take your share too."

All the things she had turned her back on—and Morgan's love.

"Most people would say it was the gold at the end of the rainbow you were offering me, instead of the burden your voice makes it out to be," she said thoughtfully.

"Don't you know where the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow really is, Iris?" he asked. He drew her to her feet. The two young figures stood close in each other's arms, in the sunset-light. "My mother told me," he said in her ear. "She said that after the adventurers were all tired with seeking it all over the world, they found it, buried under the heartstone of their home."

"It is that—for me," she said.

"And for me—always—so long as we are together."

Uncle Will came pottering out, looking for his children. "Supper's ready," he said, smiling at them. He was happy, more or less, always, but at what he saw in their faces he was especially happy, just now. They followed him hand-in-hand.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC

With Warner Baxter in the leading role "Robin Hood of El Dorado" comes to the Majestic theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

It is a romanticized slice of one of the glamorous periods of America's frontier history—that era which began in 1848 with the discovery of gold in California.

Possessing much of the epic sweep of such hits as "The Covered Wagon," "The Big Trail" and other outdoor films that marked the closing days of the silent screen, "Robin Hood of El Dorado" has a dramatic majesty that gives it the aura of importance, while at the same time retaining the intimacy of romance and personal thrills which make for good entertainment.

Mr. Mirisch, manager of the theatre, said he has secured a third dimension film, audioscopics, in which special colored glasses are furnished patrons to be used in viewing the film.

HITLER MARKS 47TH BIRTHDAY

Huge Display of Military Armaments; Carload of Gifts Are Received.

Berlin, April 22 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, an expert judge of German psyhcology, offered his loyal people a royal birthday gift Monday—a spectacular military display such as Berlin has not seen since the days of the World war. He was 47.

Der Fuehrer did not spare himself. The day began for him a few minutes after midnight when he showed himself in a focus of searchlights on the balcony of the chancellery in response to crowds below who invaded Berlin in droves, all anxious to be among the first to sign the birthday register.

In the parade Hitler stood in an automobile receiving homage of the multitude all the way to a point in the Tiergarten, where he saluted continually for about two hours during the duration of the march past him.

Weapons Thrill Crowd

A novelty for Berlin burghers was the spectacle of hundreds of two-man tanks and armed motorcycles clattering past. The crowd was visibly thrilled by thoughts of the possibilities of the new weapons.

Meanwhile, mail carriers were delivering birthday parcels to the chancellery in car-loads.

On behalf of the German civil service Der Fuehrer was presented with a hand written copy on parchment of his book, Mein Kampf (My Struggle).

Parades were also held in other garrison towns of the Reich and naval displays at Kiel and other ports.

From the Saar and the remilitarized section of the Rhineland came especially fervent greetings.

Called Nation's Saviour

The sentiment of the day seemed to be expressed in these words from a German paper: "The German people render thanks to him who led the natiou out of a terrible disunion of humiliation and impotence and resorted its honor, prestige and power."

Hitler honored General Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, by raising him to the rank of marshal.

Hitler made no formal speech but in response to one by General von Blomberg lauding him, he said:

"I build my hopes for the future on two organizations which seem to me to have the sole factors guaranteeing their fulfillment—namely, the National Socialist party, as the creative executive of the new political will, and the defensive forces, similarly the creative executive of the military power."

KEEPING BANANAS WHITE

If you are making banana shortcake, fixing cut-up bananas, or serving them in any way dip them first in a citrus juice such as that of a lemon or orange or grape fruit and it will keep the banana from looking brown and unattractive and will save you from having to prepare the bananas at the last rushed minute.

HOUSE PASSES DEFENSE BILLS

Permits Expansion of Army Air Program But Fails To Provide Funds.

Washington, April 22 (AP).—Without a single dissenting vote, the House late Monday passed in quick succession three bills of major importance to national defense and sent them to the Senate for approval.

The bills provided for:

1. Authorization for the purchase by the army of 4,000 additional airplanes.
2. Creation of junior air reserve corps in schools and universities.
3. Calling into active service 1,350 army reserve flying officers.

None of the bills provides the funds necessary to make them effective. The airplane bill was sponsored by Representative Rogers, Democrat, of New Hampshire, and Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee fathered the other two.

In calling for immediate passage of the bill authorizing the 4,000 planes, the House Military Affairs Committee report stated the army airplane strength is "deplorable." The new planes would be added to service over a five-year period.

Committee Report

The committee report declared:

"Facts strongly emphasize that our Nation is no longer protected from air attacks because of the wide extent of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and we must govern ourselves accordingly."

Earlier this session Rogers was defeated in his House fight for appropriations aggregating more than $5,000,000 to cover the airplane purchase program.

The air service training corps would be set up in the schools similar to the present reserve officers training corps. Students would be taught fundamentals of aviation by trained officers picked out by the government.

Army reserve flying officers now inactive could be called out for three-year periods of service under terms of the third national defense bill passed Monday. A cash bonus at the end of service would be paid officers.

An Evening Thought

TO SPRING

By Joyce Sherman

Last autumn I held beyond compare
The pageant of trees, the winy air,
The fruits that hung as jewels. All
The days were sweet, that season's call
Was loveliest—To her my vow
Of constancy I pledged, and now
I am untrue. I meant to cling
To fall . . . . But then I had not spring.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ANIMALS

Tom Hardy once in bitter ink
Penned a bit about a bird
Bathing at the water's brink,
Saw a bull and never stirred;
Let a stallion splash about,
Heedless of the noise he made.
Then a gentleman came out.
Fled the wagtail much afraid.
Strange indictment of us all
Hardy penned for us to see!
Yet dumb creatures, large and small
Seeing us will turn and flee.
Man the cultured and refined,
Walks the earth and ogre grim
So that all the feathered kind
Dread the mere approach of him.
Beasts instinctively retreat
If the step of man they hear.
Even dogs upon the street
Dread the stranger drawing near.
So much wrong to them we've done
Ever since the race began
That dumb creatures, every one,
Terror-stricken, flee from man.

Today's Talk

—By George Matthew Adams—

EVERYTHING PASSES

LIFE is a cycle of compensations. I have never liked that phrase, upon the passing of a useful and notable person, that his death meant a "calamity." The death of such is a great loss, and deeply regretted, but the things we do live after us and useful tasks performed are endless in their influence.

The little irritations of today pass with the day. Time heals all sorrows and losses. There is a peak to all fame and renown. There is a world of human philosophy in that beautiful poem by William Knox—"Oh Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?" It was the favorite of President Lincoln.

Tears dry, or are wiped away, losses are adjusted, wounds heal, the sorrows of the heart are softened, the applause of the moment dies away. Everything passes—excepting the results of useful service and good influence.

Someone, somewhere, is always in training to take up the unsolved problems of today, or to carry on the useful tasks of others who have, with credit and honor, finely performed their part in the play of life.

It should make us all happy that there is an abundance of work yet unattempted and that there are tasks that we alone are more able to perform than anyone else about us. Each one of us is a unique in some manner or other. This should make us feel our responsibility and spur us to useful service.

The storm passes but it is followed by the sunshine. Our friend dies but his memory abides and inspires us to work in better part. The years pass but with their passing is given to us a wealth of experience earned by men and women over centuries of time, as well as by us who inherit all that has gone before.

There should be no space in our mind or heart for regets. I look to a little slip underneath the glass of my desk, and on it is written in the hand of the poet, Celia Thaxter, these words: "The sunrise never failed as yet!"

Youth Is Struck By Automobile

William Yeally, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Yeally, McSherrystown, was injured Sunday afternoon at about 2.30 o'clock when he was struck by an automobile said to have been operated by Homer R. Sell, Littlestown. The accident occurred near the Yeally home on Main street.

The child was reported to have darted into the path of the Sell car. The driver made an effort to avoid striking the youngster. The lad was thrown over the top of the automobile and landed on the concrete highway it was reported.

Suffering from a deep laceration of the forehead, the victim went to his home and was removed by his father to the office of Dr. John Ajac, Hanover, where his injuries were treated.

TARRED VICTIM CITES BEATING

Witness Tells of Experience At Hands of Mob in Bartow, Florida.

Bartow Fla., April 22 (AP)—Sam Rogers, first of the Tampa flogging victims to testify in the trial of seven former policemen on kidnapping charges, told from the witness stand Monday how he was beaten, tarred and feathered last November 30.

The state charges that after Rogers and two other organizers of unemployed workers were questioned about their activities at the police station in Tampa they were released and seized by a mob and roughly handled that one man died.

"I was jerked across some logs," Rogers related. "Two men held my hands, another held my head down in sand and one or two others held my feet. They began immediately to beat me."

He said his tormentors used "something like a heavy, coarse belt, or water hose, and something else like a chain."

"Then they put tar on me from my ribs and shoulder blades to the bend in my knees in the back. Then they tarred and feathered me in front from my chest to my knees, then they turned me over on my face again and put other feathers on my back."

He had begun to tell about the arrival on the scene of Joseph Shoemaker, who subsequently died, when court adjourned.

Defense Attorney Pat Whitaker concluded cross-examination of Walter Roush, another state witness in the case, earlier by bringing out that Roush was not sure of the source of screams he heard in the police station the night the three flogging victims were questioned there. Roush had testified on direct examination they seemed to come from the room in which officers were questioning Shoemaker.

To combat a wave of chicken thefts, Chief of Police T. S. Bryan, of McAllen, Tex., invoked the town's old curfew law.

How are your "SYMPTOMS?"
THERE are still a few of them left—those old-timers who are continually developing new "symptoms" and seeking to placate them with old-fashioned remedies.
We modern sophisticates smile tolerantly—and turn to some new health fad. But at least the old-timers' remedies were probably harmless, while some of our new-fashioned "health" fads may be downright dangerous.

IN MEMORIAM

A thought of sweet remembrance of our dear daughter, Lucille Artus Warren, who departed this life one year ago, April 22, 1935.

A precious one from us is gone,
A vioce we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

Dear Lucille, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more;
Still in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.

Sadly missed by
Daddy and Mother,
Mr. and Mrs. McClellan Warren.

No one knows how much we miss you,
In our hearts your memory lingers;
There is not a day, Dear Lucille,
That we do not think of you.

There is a mother who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you left;
Oh how we played with you, dear sister,
Then God came and took you away;
'Tis so, but true we wonder why,
The best are always the first to die.

Sadly missed by
Sister and Brother,
Betty and Donald Warren.

Deep in our heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one laid to rest;
In memory's frame we shall keep it,
Because it was of the best.

Loving and kind in all her ways,
We will never forget that day;
An angel came and whispered:
"I must take your dear one away."

Sad and sudden was the call,
Of one loved dearly by all;
The blow was great and the shock severe,
We never thought its death so near.

By her grandparents,
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gochenour.

MAROONS OPEN WITH VICTORY

The Gettysburg high school baseball team opened its season here Tuesday afternoon by scoring an impressive 4-0 victory over Westminster high.

Ferdinando Jones, Maroon lefthander, was in excellent form, yielding but three singles. He fanned eight batsmen and did not issue a single pass.

Coach Forney's aggregation scored a run in the first frame. Stock led off with a single and advanced on Bowser's out Everhart punched out a single to score Stock.

Everhart accounted for the second Maroon tally in the fifth frame when he hit a long homerun.

Two more runs were pushed over in the last of the sixth inning. Singles by Griffin and Plantz coupled with two errors by Taylor and a pair of outs produced the tallies.

Jones was never in danger. The only men to reach base rapped out singles and then failed to advance. The Maroons played errorless ball in supporting Jones.

On Friday afternoon the Maroons will seek their second straight victory when they clash with the Mt. St. Mary's freshmen at Emmitsburg.

TWIN MARMOSETS BORN

Santa Cruz, Calif. (AP)—Twin babies weighing less than a pound each were born to two marmosets from Ecuador owned by J. P. Walker here. It is rare for marmosets to give birth in this country, Walker said.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

No hurry... WHEN YOU BAKE WITH RUMFORD

● The double raising power of Rumford has many helpful advantages beside its efficient leavening of batters and doughs. Because of its scientifically controlled leavening action—always only two-thirds expanding in the mix and one-third in the oven-heat—the mix may be covered and set aside in the refrigerator for later baking, even next day if desired. Users of Rumford find this a great convenience when unexpected guests arrive or social engagements upset baking schedules.

Buy Rumford, the pure, all-phosphate Baking Powder.
